

Anthony Mitzel did his doctoral work at University College London, UK where his PhD dissertation focused on the conception of ephemerality and the aesthetics of authenticity in relation to Italian American culture. He is an adjunct professor at the University of Bologna's Department of Interpretation and Translation (DIT)/ Department of Sociology and Business Law, where he teaches courses on language and culture, linguistics, humour studies, memetics, and Critical Media Literacy (CML). He is also an elected Executive Council Member of the Italian American Studies Association. Mitzel's creative works have been published in Italy both in Italian and English by Tratti and in the United States by Jenny and Voices in Italian America. He has also presented his research at numerous conferences in Italy and around the world.